EXECUTIVE BIOGRAPHY

SHORT VERSION

Scott Wilcox is the founder of Sicuro Group, a risk management consultancy established in 2005 that has supported operations in more than 140 countries. The firm delivers advanced security, technology, and logistics solutions for governments, corporates, and multinationals working in complex regions. He is also the founder of GRAAL, a company that builds national resilience by developing human capital and advancing information, spectrum, and cyber dominance.

Building on three decades of experience, Scott advises governments, corporates, and family offices on crisis response, resilience, and market entry. A former Royal Marines Commando, he has been named one of the Top 30 Security Influencers Globally by International Security Journal in both 2024 and 2025 and serves on U.S. State Department OSAC steering committees for MENA and Afghanistan.

FULL VERSION

Scott Wilcox is the founder of Sicuro Group, a risk management consultancy established in 2005 that has delivered operations in more than 140 countries. Under his leadership, Sicuro Group has become a trusted partner for governments, corporates, and multinationals, providing security, technology, and logistics solutions in some of the world's most complex markets and high-risk regions.

He is also the co-founder of GRAAL, a company that builds national resilience by developing human capital and advancing information, spectrum, and cyber dominance.

Scott serves as a senior advisor to governments, corporates, and family offices where security, legal, financial, and reputational risks converge. His focus spans preparedness, resilience, and crisis response, helping organisations contain challenges before they escalate into crises.

Scott's expertise is sought by senior leaders in both public and private sectors, advising on capability development, procurement, logistics, and strategic problem-solving. His portfolio includes high-level engagements with C-suite executives and government departments, with projects across technology, finance, and consumer goods sectors in major global hubs such as New York, London, Paris, Dubai, and Washington, D.C.

He has been recognised with honours including the Intersec Humanitarian Award for crisis management and disaster response and was named among the world's Top 30 Security Influencers in 2024 and 2025 by International Security Journal.

A former Royal Marines Commando with more than a decade of operational leadership, Scott has further strengthened his expertise with executive education from Ashridge, INSEAD, and Harvard, and he is a Fellow of the UK Institute of Leadership and Management. He also serves on the U.S. State Department's OSAC steering committees for MENA and Afghanistan and sits on the board of the Friends of the American University of Afghanistan.

Having lived and worked in the United Arab Emirates for near two decades, Scott continues to play a central role in shaping resilient strategies for governments and organisations navigating today's volatile global landscape.
